Fund manager’s commentary: The last quarter of 2024 brought positive returns to all pension funds without exception. In November, with the election of Trump as U.S. president—who promised to boost business and raise import tariffs—expectations of future inflation increased, as a result, interest rates rose, while risky assets became more expensive. Over the quarter, the overall index of developed-country equities, expressed in euros, rose by 7.6%, but regional performance varied: U.S. stocks in euros increased by more than 10%, while European stocks fell by 2.7%. Shares in emerging markets were down by 0.9%. The global bond index fell by 1.4% following interest rate hikes, while returns on riskier high-yield corporate bond index rose by 2.0%.
