* Past performance provides no guarantee of future performance.
 The average change in the unit value and in the value of the benchmark over the last three, five, ten years is calculated as the geometric average of the annual changes in the unit value and changes in the value of the benchmark.
 Standard deviation is a statistical risk indicator that shows how strongly changes in the value of a unit fluctuate compared to their average change. The standard deviation of the change in the unit value over the last three, five, ten years and since inception is the annual standard deviation of the change in the unit value for the specified period.

Fund manager's commentary

Developed markets central banks either started or continued to cut interest rates which fueled the rally in bonds – resulting in the best quarter in recent history. Inflation continued to decline while the global economy continued to show expansion, although, on a slower pace. While equity markets saw more volatility due to large shifts in Japanese yen and momentous fears of an increase in recession possibility – bonds proved to be a safe haven with a continuous climb higher. Euro zone investment grade sovereign and corporate bond index rose by 3,82%, emerging market debt index pushed higher by 5,6%, while European high yield index increased by 3,65%.
